Index to Volume Thirteen (1996)

Bradley, Joseph M., Integration or Assimilation? Scottish Society, Football and Irish Immigrants 2.61

Cox, Richard Willam, Annual Bibliography of Publications on the History of Sport, 1994–95 3.373

Cox, Richard William, Annual Bibliography of Publications on the History of Sport, 1993–94 2.132

Cox, Richard William, PC-Based Bibliographic Databases 2.215

Crowther, Nigel B., Sports Violence in the Roman and Byzantine Empires: A Modern Legacy? 3.445

Eisenberg, Christiane, Charismatic National Leader: Turnvater Jahn 1.14

Faure, Jean-Michel, National Identity and the Sporting Champion: Jean Borotra and French History 1.86

Gehrmann, Siegfried, Symbol of National Resurrection: Max Schmeling, German Sports Idol 1.101

Hess, Rob, Women and Australian Rules Football in Colonial Melbourne 3.356

Holt, Richard and J.A. Mangan, Prologue: Heroes of a European Past 1.11

Holt, Richard, Cricket and Englishness: The Batsman as Hero 1.48

Horak, Roman and Wolfgang Moderthaner, A Culture of Urban Cosmopolitanism: Uridil and Sindelar as Viennese Coffee-House Heroes 1.139

Huggins, Mike, Lord Bentinck, the Jockey Club and Racing Morality in Mid-Nineteenth Century England: The 'Running Rein' Derby Revisited 3.432

Jørgensen, Per, 'Order, Discipline and Self-Control': The Breakthrough for the Danish Sports Federation and Sport, 1896–1918 3.340

Kirk, David, Foucault and the Limits of Corporeal Regulation: The Emergence, Consolidation and Decline of Social Medical Inspection and Physical Training in Australia, 1909–1930 2.114

Krüger, Michael, Body Culture and Nation Building: The History of Gymnastics in Germany in the Period of its Foundation as a Nation-State 3.409

Lanfranchi, Pierre and Alfred Wahl, The Immigrant as Hero: Kopa, Mekloufi and French Football 1.114

Lewis, R.W., Football Hooliganism in England before 1914: A Critique of the Dunning Thesis 3.310

Lipoński, Wojciech, Still an Unknown European Tradition:

Polish Sport in the European Cultural Heritage 2.1
Mangan, J. A., Muscular, Militaristic and Manly: The British Middle-Class Hero as Moral Messenger 1.28
Mangan, J.A. and Richard Holt, Epilogue: Heroes for a European Future 1.169
Mason, Tony, 'Our Stephen and Our Harold': Edwardian Footballers as Local Heroes 1.71
McKenzie, Callum E., The Origins of the British Field Sports Society 2.177
Merrett, Christopher, 'In Nothing Else are the Deprivers so Deprived': South African Sport, Apartheid and Foreign Relations, 1945–71 2.146
Morgan, Roger, A Fifteenth-Century Tennis Court in London 3.418
Mullan, Michael, The Devolution of the Irish Economy in the Nineteenth Century and the Bifurcation of Irish Sport 2.42
Ndee, Hamad S., Sport, Culture and Society from an African Perspective: A Study in Historical Revisionism 2.192
Pivato, Stefano, Catholic Hero: The Bartali Myth 1.128
Polley, Martin, 'No business of ours'?: The Foreign Office and the Olympic Games, 1896–1914 2.96
Pope, S.W., Amateurism and American Sports Culture: The Invention of an Athletic Tradition in the United States, 1870–1900 3.290
Rauch, André, Courage against Cupidity: Carpentier and Dempsey – Symbols of Cultural Confrontation 1.156
Rossi, John P., Blacks in Major League Baseball: The Experience of the First Generation, 1947–61 3.397
Trangbæk, Else, Danish Gymnastics: What's so Danish about the Danes? 2.203
Twigg, John, Student Sports, and their Context, in Seventeenth-Century Cambridge 2.80
Waser, Anne Marie, Tennis in France, 1880–1930 2.166
Wenn, Stephen R., Death-knell for the Amateur Athletic Union: Avery Brundage, Jeremiah Mahoney and the 1935 AAU Convention 3.261
Yttergren, Leif, Stockholm and the Rise of Modern Sports, 1860–98 3.404

Book Reviews 2.220, 3.459

Issue No.1 (April 1996) is a special issue edited by Richard Holt, J.A. Mangan and Pierre Lanfranchi entitled 'European Heroes: Myth, Identity, Sport'.